

EDWARD CARR

Deputy Editor, The Economist

One of the world's leading news editors on global affairs, offering a complete view across geopolitics, economics, business and society.

EDWARD CARR

his thoughts

A highly-respected writer and commentator on global strategic affairs and business. He is Deputy Editor of The Economist, formerly its Foreign Editor and Business Affairs Editor, based in London.

He currently provides the editorial leadership for The Economist across the newspaper, on international affairs, politics, economic, business, science & technology, trade & industry ... and is uniquely placed to understand key global developments and to help to understand the implications for international businesses.

His wealth of experience previously as most recently Foreign Editor and Business Affairs Editor, giving him a highly comprehensive perspective on the world. His recent surveys have focused on the Euro Zone crisis, and the future role of China in the world and the Arab Spring.
